

The Democrats, in Congress, in their zeal to "oust" the public credit, should not forget the electoral count resolution they worried over so much in December.

When General Garfield makes his cabinet he will do it with two special objects in view—first to take care of the country, and second to take care of the Republican party.

The report from Washington yesterday said Senator Matt H. Carpenter was dangerously ill, and his life despaired of. The advice to-day are that he is better. A Washington dispatch dated last night says: "A report was circulated at the capitol this morning that he was dead, but a messenger who was sent to his house returned with word that he was better. Mr. Carpenter is suffering from congestion of the lungs, with threatened pneumonia, occasioned by a cold from becoming heated in the Senate chamber."

There are few acts of truer generosity or of grander munificence than that which is recorded of Mr. William Phelps, the young millionaire, of New Jersey. Some time ago the Bergen county savings bank failed, and among the depositors were many poor people who had in the bank sums of ten dollars and under. Among this class there was a good deal of suffering on account of the bank failure. These unfortunate persons lived in Mr. Phelps' own town. They were his neighbors, and while off in Italy seeking rest and health, he heard of the sufferings of the depositors. He had no pecuniary interest in the bank, but his heart was touched, and he telegraphed from Florence, Italy, to his agent in New York, as follows:

"Pay immediately all deposits in savings bank of $10 and under, principal and interest, charge the same to me."

This was an act which does honor to the name of William Phelps. He is rich, of course, and will never feel the few thousands that will be necessary to pay the small depositors, but riches do not always touch the sympathies nor unloose the pursestrings; and because the sufferings of the Hackensack depositors turned his mind from gaiety of Florence, and from his immense business interests and opened his pocket-book, he has done an act which is more grand than all the charities which Stewart dispensed during his life. Mr. Phelps is a very successful business man, a fine scholar, a good politician, and a finished orator. He served in the Forty-third Congress, and in 1874 was beaten for re-election by seven votes. He is director in more than six National banks, and at one time was a director in twelve railway companies.

It would be a sensible thing if the United States Senate would abolish what is known as executive sessions. These sessions, so far as preventing the premature publication of treaties is concerned, proved a failure. The newspaper reporter seems to be almost omnipresent in these days of fast journalism, and no executive session of the Senate is sufficient to keep proceedings entirely secret. The country has not forgotten how the Senators of the United States, the President, and all heads of departments in Washington were astonished to learn that the New York Tribune one morning in June, 1871, published the entire Washington treaty within five hours after the executive session of the Senate had agreed to the treaty, and had it published exactly as it was adopted by the Senate in secret session! This memorable session was held at night, and it was nearly midnight before the proceedings in regard to the treaty were concluded; and yet when the Tribune went to press at four o'clock the following morning, it gave the world the entire treaty which was several columns in length. This led to an investigation and to the arrest of White and Randall, the Washington correspondents of the New York Tribune. During their confinement in the capitol the Tribune doubled their salaries and paid all their personal expenses. The investigation and trial lasted two or three months, but nothing definite was learned as to the manner in which the Tribune got the treaty. It was marvelous piece of enterprise whether it was stolen or not. It was the only paper among the great metropolitan journals that contained the Washington treaty on the morning immediately after its approval by the Senate. When the last word of the treaty went over the wires from Washington to New York, the associated press and the morning papers in New York were rather startled to hear the telegraphic instruments say "three cheers for the New York Tribune and the Washington treaty." And back to Washington went the message, "three cheers for the Washington correspondents of the New York Tribune!" The associated press and the rival morning papers in New York, became convinced that they had been "left." And so they were. All the facts in regard to the publication of the treaty have not been known to this day. Now there is another investigation to find out how certain newspapers got ahead of the Senate on the Chinese treaty. Ben Hill has undertaken to investigate the matter, and of course he will not know any more when he investigates than he does now. These facts lead to the belief that it would be as well to abolish the executive sessions of the Senate.

A joint convention for the final ballot will be held to-morrow noon.

MATT CARPENTER.

A Report that He is Not Dangerously Ill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Senator Matt Carpenter took to his bed one week ago yesterday, sick from an attack of congestion of the lungs. The Wisconsin Senator had been in New York trying a case the week before, and while there caught a severe cold. This was aggravated by his making several speeches in the Senate afterward. On Thursday he was seriously ill, but on that day the crisis was passed. Since then he has been steadily gaining. His physicians say he will be able to be about in a few days. To-day a ridiculous report was circulated at the capitol that the brilliant Wisconsin senator was dead. This report brought a crowd of callers to his house. This evening a regular reception was held in the convalescent's room. Senator Edmunds, who was one of the callers, said to Mrs. Carpenter, "They tried to-day, at the capitol, to perform an act for your husband, in his absence, that they have never been able to do when he is present."

"What is that?" was asked.

"To lay him out," was the grim reply of St. Jerome.

Again in the course of the general conversation, the subject of Mrs. Hayes banishing wine from state dinners came up. Senator Carpenter recently attended one of these dinners. He said, with a half chuckle, this evening that it was really at this dinner that he laid the foundation of his cold.

THE CABINET.

More Speculations Relating to Garfield's Cabinet Appointments.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—A gentleman who has recently returned from Mentor, and who ought to know, says positively of his own knowledge that neither the secretaryship of State, nor any other cabinet position, has been tendered to Senator Blaine; that, at the private conference held between Garfield and Blaine here in November, no such tender was made. "The cabinet," said this gentleman, "has not been determined upon, and will not be until it has been fixed upon as a whole. The position of Senator Blaine is probably this: He perhaps, can be secretary of state if he is satisfied with the rest of the cabinet, and willing to work harmoniously with it. Garfield is going to disappoint a great many people in his cabinet, which, perhaps, will be definitely settled upon in about three weeks from this time. Many of the names now prominently mentioned will not be seen in it." A friend of Senator Blaine said to-day that if Blaine discovered that the Conkling-Grant element was to be represented by a disagreeable, aggressive man, he would not become secretary of state. A senator who is an intimate friend of Senator Blaine said yesterday that he was satisfied that the latter had not been tendered the secretaryship of state by General Garfield. This Senator added, however, that he believed Mr. Blaine would be appointed to that position; that "what the people have universally indorsed is likely to be done by a new Administration, and all classes of this country have indorsed the suggestion of the appointment of Mr. Blaine as secretary of state." The Senator further said that he was satisfied Mr. Blaine would accept the appointment if tendered him, but that "Blaine is too great a man to even intimate in advance of the offer that he wants the place." The report that Hamilton Fish had tendered his old position as secretary of state, was due to the fact that President Hayes wrote a letter to General Garfield stating that, if he (Garfield) wished to avoid the New York complications, he would do well to appoint Hamilton Fish to his old position, to whom neither faction in New York, could take exceptions.

A LUCKY DUTCHMAN.

A Poor Dutchman in New Haven, Conn., Falls Heir to a Fortune Estimated at from $25,000,000 to $15,000,000.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 24.—Rudolf Von Baren, or, as he styled himself on coming to this country from Holland last July, "John Spier," has been in New Haven since he arrived in the United States, with the exception of a few weeks, during which he delayed in Philadelphia, where he landed, by birth of a son, his only child. In New Haven he has not been able to support himself entirely, and, even though assisted by several charitable people, has at times suffered for the necessities of life. Late last week there came to this city, direct from Rotterdam, Heinrich Von Baren, who was accompanied by William A. Beach, the New York lawyer. Heinrich Von Baren is a half-brother of Rudolf Von Baren, of this city, and he brought with him the first news that Rudolf had of the great fortune to which he (the latter) had become heir. The fortune is the estate of Rudolf's grand uncle, Heinrich Spier, of Hamburg, who died about December 31, and is estimated to be worth from $25,000,000 to $15,000,000. The meeting between the brothers was not an extremely friendly one, but Mr. Beach succeeded in bringing about a reconciliation so that the two could talk business. The news at first startled the brother here. It seemed to be too good to be true, but there could be no doubt of it, especially after Heinrich, in the presence of witnesses, drew from his pocket first $3,000, then $5,000, and finally $25,000 in cash, which he offered to Rudolf if he would agree to sign a paper which he brought with him, which would make Heinrich the manager of the great estate. Heinrich agreed to pay to Rudolf so long as he lived the sum of $25,000 weekly, providing he might retain the remainder of the income for his own personal use. The offer was rejected. The newly made millionaire changed his name in consequence of a family quarrel. He married his wife under his assumed name, and a few days ago was remarried under his own name.

GRANT'S BILL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—General Logan's bill to place General Grant on the retired list was defeated in the Senate by a strict party vote, except that Lamar and McPherson, with Davis, of Illinois, voted "aye" with the Republicans.

Messrs. Eaton, Garland, Maxey, and Wallace, opposed to the motion, were paired with Conkling, Blaine, Carpenter, and Cameron, of Pennsylvania, respectively, who were absent. Anthony, Bailey, Bruce, Call, Cockrell, Grover, Hawkins, Hereford, Hull, of Colorado, Jones, of Florida, Jones, of Virginia, Paddock, and Salisbury were also reported absent.

MILTON.

The second lecture of the college course was delivered in college chapel last Thursday evening by D. H. Fletcher, of Chicago. Despite the fact that there was much sickness in town there was a good attendance, and the lecture was not as large as that which greeted Mr. Albeck. The subject of Mr. Fletcher's lecture was "The Life, Character and Writings of William Cullen Bryant." It was scholarly and thorough in its research; chaste and refined in style; and gave evidence that the lecturer is both a fine scholar and an orator. His quotations from the poetry of the great poet and editor, were presented in a manner that showed Mr. Fletcher to be not only a cultured speaker, but an eloquent and expressive that we have seen in many a day. We commend them to the notice of our student friends as a sample of what gestures should be and trust that they all noted how much this accomplishment of Mr. Fletcher's added to the effectiveness of his effort. Although the lecture was not as pleasing to the general public as its predecessor in the course, it was an excellent effort.

On Friday morning the body of W. E. Hemphill, who died at Huron, Dakota, on the 12th inst., arrived from Madison in charge of C. M. Morse and P. M. Green, the latter going there to meet Mr. Morse on his arrival from the West. It was found when the remains reached here that the coffin was sealed owing to the fact that the deceased was a victim of malignant diphtheria, and it was deemed wise not to open the coffin, consequently the body was taken direct to the cemetery, and at 4 o'clock the burial took place under the direction of the Orphanian Lyceum, of which society the deceased was an active and honored member during his school life. The funeral services took place Saturday morning at the Seventh-day Baptist church, Rev. E. M. Dunn officiating, assisted by Rev. James Bailey. The music was furnished by a quartet composed of Messrs. J. G. Burdick, D. F. Brown, W. L. Ferris and W. B. Anderson, and was very appropriate. The Orphanian Lyceum attended in a body, and the student friends and acquaintances of the deceased were present in large numbers. The bereaved father and sister and other relatives have the heartfelt sympathy of the whole community in this their hour of sadness and sorrow, the departed having the love, respect and esteem of all who had an acquaintance with him, his kindly heart, manly life and genial temperament making him friends in all the walks of life, and his sudden death made us all feel that we had lost a dear friend and the world a true, noble man, and one who would have made it better for living in it. Mr. Morse was with Mr. Hemphill during his illness, he being confined to the house but three days, and informs us that he fully realized his condition, and knew that he must die and requested that the superintendent of the railway company, who was a warm friend, should not be allowed to visit him lest the disease, being contagious, should be communicated to others. Mr. Morse has the thanks of not only the relatives of the deceased, but of all friends for the friendship which he exhibited in remaining with Mr. Hemphill during his painful illness, and in braving danger to himself in accompanying the remains here, when his own health was not good, and he had been without rest for several nights. W. E. Hemphill was for many terms a student in the College, where he was known as a close student, a clear reasoner and a pleasant associate, and while finishing his last year of work in the classical course received an offer to go into the employ of Brown & Morse, merchants of Lake Benton, Minn., and accepted the position. He remained there until the opening of the spring term of last year when he returned and entered the college to finish his studies, and graduate in the class of 'eighty.' Soon after the term opened he was offered a position in a surveying party sent out by the Northwestern railroad company and accepted. He was engaged in surveying the Black Hills line of that company during the summer and fall and early winter went into the company's office at Huron, Dakota, where he remained until his death. He won the regard and esteem of his employers and was to be appointed private secretary to Mr. Nichols, superintendent of the Chicago and Dakota railroad company at an early day, had not death marked him as its victim.

Prof. R. B. Anderson, of the State University, will deliver the third lecture of the college course at the chapel on evening next, February 3d. Prof. Anderson is too well known to need any commendation at our hands, and we can say that all who love a literary feast should hear him.

John Zull sold H. H. Waterman, last Wednesday, the finest cow that we have ever seen here. She was six years old and weighed sixteen hundred pounds. He also bought a three-year-old heifer of the same party, that tipped the beam at thirteen hundred and fifty pounds. These cattle were extra.

The new reservoir of the St. Paul Company at this station is eighteen feet high and twenty-four feet in diameter, instead of 24x18 as the types made us say last week.

The case of Pat Hayes vs. N. O. Clarke, to recover an alleged balance due on a sale of grain, was adjudicated before Justice Weaver last Wednesday, Wm. Smith Esq., appearing for the plaintiff and Hon. Piny Norcross for the defendant. The jury rendered a verdict of "no cause of action."

The folks in town who are in the hands of physicians are all doing well, and showing signs of improvement, and none, so far as we know, are considered dangerous.

Chestnut coal is still selling at the yard, in this village, at $8.50 per ton.

Mrs. J. C. West, of Shiloh, New Jersey, is in town visiting relatives.

Among the student friends of the late W. E. Hemphill, who came here to attend his funeral, were C. E. Crandall, of Cooksville, G. W. Brown, of De Forest, T. B. Earl, and Pen. Brown, of Edgerton, the Melays, of Rock Prairie, E. W. Bentley, of Edgerton, and several others.

On Wednesday evening the parishioners and friends of Rev. W. T. Millar, pastor of the Methodist church, made him a donation visit at the church; and despite the fact that a large number of his congregation were ill, and therefore unable to be present, the attendance was quite large, and the receipts aggregated about seventy dollars.

The total shipments of live stock from this station, last week, aggregated five carloads, Williams & Borden shipping four, and H. H. Waterman one. The heavy market was doing all the week, and buyers paid $4.50 for common to $4.70 for choice; and we hear of higher figures being offered by buyers from other points, but in most instances it was offered to parties who had already sold.

The entertainment given by the Favorite Concert Company in the Methodist church Monday evening was one of the finest ever produced in this place, and a goodly number of our music loving citizens were in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. Burdick did finely, as they invariably do. Miss Hakes brought forth loud and merited applause by the charming manner in which she rendered her selection, as was a highly cultured musician, and the perfect control she has over her voice is remarkable. Mr. Anderson sang "When the Tide Comes Rolling In" with fine effect, and fully sustained his reputation as a bass soloist. Miss Ella Burdick presided at the organ.—Edgerton Reporter.

The Divisions of Labor

Montreal Herald: Tennyson can take a worthless piece of paper, and, by writing a poem on it, make it worth $5000. That's genius. Vanderbilt can write fewer words on a similar sheet and make it worth $50,000,000. That's capital. And the United States Government can take an ounce and a quarter of gold and stamp upon it "eagle-head" and "twenty dollars." That's money. The mechanic can take the material worth $50 and make it into a watch worth $100. That's skill. The merchant can take an article worth 25 cents and sell it to you for $1. That's business. A lady can purchase a comfortable bonnet for $10, but prefers to pay $100 for one, because it is much more stylish. That's foolishness. The ditch digger works ten hours a day and digs out 3 or 4 tons of earth for $1. That's labor.

THE MILLER'S MAID.

There is a lonely mill, close beside the little hamlet of Udorf, near the Rhine shore, between the villages of Hersel and Ursel, on the left bank below Bonn. This mill is said to have been the scene of the following story:

It was on a Sunday morning, "ages long ago," that the miller of this mill sent his whole family forth to hear the holy mass at the nearest church in the village of Hersel. The mill, which was also his residence, was left in charge of a servant-girl named Hannechen, or Jenny, a stout-hearted lass, who had long lived with him in that capacity. An infant child, of an age unfit for church, was left in her charge likewise.

The girl was busily employed in preparing dinner for the return of her master and his family, when, who should enter all of a sudden but an old swart-faced man, named Heinrich, Botteloh. He was an idle, graceless fellow, whom the miller had forbidden his house, but whom Jenny liked, with amiable perversity peculiar to her sex, only, perhaps, all the better because others gave him no countenance. She was glad to see him, and she told him so, too; and although in the midst of her work, she not only got him something to eat at once, but also found time to sit down with him and have a gossip, while he dispatched the food she set before him. As she ate, however, he let fall his knife.

"Pick that up, my lass," said he, in a joking way, to the good-natured girl.

"Nay, Heinrich," she replied, "your back should be more supple than mine, for you have less work to make it stiff. I labor all day long, and you do nothing. But never mind! 'twould go hard with me an' I refused to do more than that for you, had thought you be."

This was spoken half sportively, and half in good earnest; for, kind-hearted as the girl was, and as she liked the scapegrace, she was too honest and industrious herself to encourage or approve of idleness or a suspicious course of life in any one else, however dear to her. She stooped down, accordingly, to pick up the knife. As she was in the act of rising, however, the treacherous villain drew a dagger from under his coat, and caught her by the nape of the neck, gripping her throat firmly with his fingers to prevent her screaming the while.

"Now, lass," he said, swearing out a bad oath at the same time, "where is master's money? I'll have it or your life, so take your choice."

The terrified girl would fain have parleyed with the ruffian, but he would hear nothing she could say.

"Master's money or your life, lass?" was all the answer he vouchsafed to her entreaties and adjurations. "Choose at once," was the only alternative he offered her; "the grave or the gold!"

She saw that there was no hope of mercy at his hands; and, as she saw that her native resolution awoke in her bosom. Like the generality of her gentle sex, she was timid at trifles; a scratch was a subject of fear to her; a drop of blood caused her to faint; an unwanted sound filled her soul with fear in the night. But when her energies were aroused by any adequate cause, she proved, as her sex have ever done, that in courage, in endurance, in presence of mind, and in resources for every emergency, she far surpassed the bravest and coolest man.

"Well, well, Heinrich!" she said, resigning, "that is to be must be. But if you take the money, I shall even go along with ye. This will be no home for me any more. But ease your grip of my neck a little—don't squeeze so hard; I can't move, you hug me too tight. And if I can't stir, you can't get the money; that's clear, you know. Besides, time presses; and if it be done at all, it must be done quickly, as the household will shortly be back from Hersel."

The ruffian relaxed his grip, and, finally, let go his hold. Her reasons were all cogent with his cupidity.

"Come," she said, "quick! quick!—no delay. The money is in master's bedroom."

She tripped up stairs gayly as a lark; he followed closely at her heels. She led the way into her master's bedroom, and pointed out the coffer in which his money was secured.

"Here," she said, reaching him an ax which lay in the corner of the room, "while you are working up, I shall just step to my apartment, and get a few things ready for our flight, as well as my own little saving for the last five years."

The ruffian was thrown off his guard by her openness and her anxiety to accompany him. Like all egotists, he deceived himself, when self-deceit was most certain to be his destruction.

"Go, lass," was all he said; "but be not long. This job will be done in a twinkling."

She disappeared at the words. He immediately broke open the chest, and was soon engaged in rummaging its contents.

As he was thus employed, however, absorbed in the contemplation of his prey, and eagerly occupied in securing it on his person, the brave-hearted girl stole down stairs on tiptoe. Creeping softly along the passages, she speedily gained the door of the chamber unseen by him, and likewise unheard. It was but the work of a moment for her to turn the key in the wards and lock him in. This done, she rushed forth to the outer door of the mill, and gave the alarm. "Fly! fly!" she shrieked to the child, her master's little boy, an infant five years old, the only being within sight or sound of her. "Fly! fly to father! fly for your life! Tell him we shall all be murdered an' he not hasty back! fly! fly!"

The child, who was at play before the door, at once obeyed the energetic command of the brave girl, and sped as fast as his tiny legs could carry him on the road by which he knew his parents would return from church. Hannechen cheered him heartily, and inspired his little heart as he sped.

"Bless thee, boy! bless thee!" she exclaimed, in the gladness of her heart; "an' master arrives in time, I will offer up a taper on the altar of our blessed Lady of the Kreuzberg by Bonn."

She sat down by the stone bench by the mill door to ease her over-excited spirit; and she wept as she sat, at the thoughts of her happy deliverance.

"Thank God!" she ejaculated, "thank God for this escape. Oh! the deadly villain! and I so fond of him, too!"

lain's hand beckoned to some one in the distance, and then looked anxiously after her infant emissary. The little messenger held on his way unharmed, however, and she thought to herself that the alarm was a false one, raised by a hollow spot in the next field, the channel of a natural drain, then dry with the heat of summer, she saw another ruffian start up from the bed of the drain, and catching him in his arms hasten toward the mill, in accordance with the directions of his accomplice. In a moment she perceived her danger, and in a moment more she formed her future plan of proceeding. Retreating into the mill she double-locked and bolted the door, the only apparent entrance to the edifice, every other obvious access to the interior being barred by strong grates fixed at all the windows, and then took her post at an upper casement determined to await patiently either her master's return, and her consequent delivery from that dangerous position, or her own death, if it were inevitable.

"Never," said she to herself, "never shall I leave my master's house a prey to such villains, or permit his property to be carried off before my eyes by them, while I have life and strength to defend it."

She had barely time to secure herself within, when the ruffian without, holding the hapless child in one hand, and a long sharp knife in the other, assailed the door with kicks, and curses, and imprecations of the most dreadful character.

"Confound thee," he cried, applying the foulest epithets of which the free speaking Teutonic language is so copious; "open the door, or I'll break it up ye."

"If you can, you may," was all the noble girl replied. "God is greater than you, and in Him I put my trust."

"Cut the brat's throat!" roared the imprisoned ruffian above; "that will bring her to her reason."

Stout-hearted as poor Hannechen was, she quailed at this cruel suggestion. For a moment her resolution wavered; but it was only for a moment. She saw that her own death was certain if she admitted the assailant, and she knew that her master would be robbed. She had no reason to hope that even the life of the infant would be spared by her compliance, and she was not a coward.

"No," she said, "I will not yield. I will stand firm, and I will die."

"I put my trust in God," replied the dauntless girl; "never shall ye set foot within these walls whilst I have life to prevent ye."

The ruffian laid the infant for a moment on the sword as he sought about for combustibles wherewith to execute his latter threat. In this search he espied, perhaps, the only possible clandestine entrance to the building. It was a large aperture in the wall, communicating with the great wheel and other machinery of the mill, and was a point entirely unprotected, for the reason that the simple occupants had never supposed it feasible for any one to seek admission through such a dangerous hole. Placed with this discovery, the ruffian returned to the infant, and, tying the hands and feet of the little innocent, threw it on the ground even as a butcher will fling a lamb destined for the slaughter, to await his time for slaying. He then stole back to the aperture, by which he hoped to effect an entrance. All this was unseen by the dauntless girl within.

In the meanwhile her mind was busied with a thousand cogitations. She had perceived that no means were left untried to effect an entrance, and she knew that on the exclusion of her foe depended her own existence. A thought struck her.

"It is Sunday," said she to herself; "the mill never works on the Sabbath, suppose I set it agoing now? It can be seen far off, and haply my master, or some of his neighbors, wondering at the sight, may haste hither to know the cause. A lucky thought," she exclaimed, "it is God that has sent it to me!"

No sooner said than done. Being all her life accustomed to mill-work, it was but the work of a moment for her to set the machinery in motion. A brisk breeze which sprang up, as it were, by the special interposition of Providence, at once set the sails flying. The arms of the huge engine whirled around with fearful rapidity; the great wheel slowly revolved on its axle; the smaller gear turned and creaked and groaned, according as they came into action, and the mill was in full operation.

It was that very instant that the ruffian, Diether, had succeeded in squeezing himself through the aperture in the wall and getting safely lodged in the interior of the great drum-wheel. His dismay, however, was indescribable when he began to be whirled about with its rotations, and found that all his efforts to put a stop to the powerful machinery which set it in motion, or to extricate himself from his perilous situation, were fruitless.

His cries were most appalling; his shrieks were truly fearful; his curses and imprecations were horrible to hear. Hannechen hastened to the spot, and saw him caught, like a reptile, as he was, in his own trap. It need not be added that she did not liberate him. She knew that he would be more frightened than hurt, if he kept within his rotary prison; and she knew, also, that, unless he attempted to escape, there was no danger of his falling out of it, even though he were insensible and inanimate all the while. In the meantime, the wheel went round and round with the ruffian along with it, steadily and unceasingly, too. In vain did he promise the stout-hearted girl to work her no harm; in vain did he implore her pity on his helpless condition; in vain did he pray to all the powers of Heaven, and adjure all the powers of Hell to his aid. She would not hear nor heed him; and, unheeded and unheeded of him likewise, muttering curses, he was whirled round and round in the untiring wheel, until at last feeling and perception failed him, and he saw and heard no more. He fell senseless on the bottom of the engine, but even then his inanimate body continued to be whirled round and round and round as before; the brave girl not daring to trust to appearances in connection with such a villain, and being, therefore, afraid to suspend the working of the machinery or stop the mill-gear and tackle from running at their fullest speed.

A loud knocking at the door was shortly after heard, and she hastened thither. It was her master and his family, accompanied by several of their neighbors. The unaccounted appearance of the mill-sails in full swing on Sunday, and the loud knocking, attracted their attention, and they had hastened home from church for the purpose of ascertaining the cause of the phenomenon. The father bore his little boy in his arms; he had cut the cord wherewith the child was tied, but he was unable to obtain any account of the extraordinary circumstances that had occurred from the affrighted innocent.

Hannechen, in a few words, told all; and then the spirit which had sustained her so long and so well while the emergency lasted, forsook her at once as it passed away. She fell senseless into the arms of the miller's oldest son, and was with great difficulty recovered.

The machinery of the mill was at once stopped, and the inanimate ruffian dragged from the great wheel. The other ruffian was brought down from his prison. Both were then bound and sent off to Bonn under a strong escort; and in due course came under the hands of the town executioner.

It was not long till Hannechen became a bride. The bridegroom was the miller's son, who had loved her long and well, but with a passion previously unexpressed. They lived thereafter happily together for many years, and died at a good old age, surrounded by a flourishing family. To the latest hour of her life, this brave-hearted woman would shudder as she told the tale of her danger and her deliverance.

Harness Notes on Horses.

There are few things which cause more delay and trouble in farm work during the hot months of summer than the galls and sores that come upon the shoulders and backs of work horses. A vast amount of hard work must be done, and the animals are strong and well enough to do it, provided there were not these painful sores that prevent their applying themselves to the labor.

A horse with shoulder or back galls, or both, suffers pain, which is put into the harness. The direct cause of these is the friction to which the parts are subjected, combined with the excessive heat and great flow of sweat. Inflammation and chafing of the skin are produced much more readily in hot than in cold weather, because the conditions of greater friction are then present. The preventive is in reducing the friction to the least possible amount.

In the first place, the harness must fit closely and smoothly to the form of the horse, that the weight of the load may be uniformly distributed over the surface beneath the harness. Secondly, the horse should be in a healthy state, that the muscles and skin may be of their normal toughness, and the sweating not unnaturally profuse. This involves the proper care and feeding of the horse. A poorly kept animal, or one not in good health, will become sore more readily than one in good health. When the sores are already formed, a speedy cure is the thing needed. Sponge carefully the affected parts, to remove all accumulations from sweat. Then bathe with a lotion of alum and tannin, with a little lanolin added. All pressure upon the sore should be removed by a proper adjustment of the harness, and, if necessary, keep the horse from work until cured.

The Old Homesteads of New England.

The sweetest and most natural outgrowth of old-time pastoral life was a love of and clinging to the old homestead. Once New England was full of them, great, brown, homely houses, facing the south and to the green lanes; shut in by ancestral fields; standing quite even with the green sward, which they met with low-lying stones dug out from their own pastures. Each had its family burying-place—blessed spot. They were all rich in springs, and brooks, and woodlands. They had a thousand years after year, the glory of trees, and bushes, and vines; the wild growth of seeds, flung by the winds into the crevices of walls and unused places. That which was peculiar to them, that which could not be simulated by art, was a certain beauty given to them by time, and use, and decay—a sort of mellowing tints the landscape of the piles and their adjuncts, by which each homestead took unto itself an individual expression for its owner, and his descendants. The aspect of a farm-house, says the General Assembly of Kentucky, is the truest expression of it, as the recognition as the face of a father, or grandfather. It was to be held in the family name, and go down with it. It was the sanctuary of homely virtues, the center of family reunions; the place of its yearly thanksgiving; a spot from which its membership had enlarged and diverged; and to which, when they died, its sons and daughters were brought back for burial.

In it, generation after generation, there was always one left. It was either a faithful son or daughter who had married one of her own sort. These men and women were spoken of as "the boys and girls at home," and, as such, they were most admirable. No matter how little fitted they seemed to be for any other sphere, as the appendages and rulers of these old homes they could hardly have been changed for the better. They were a portion of their appropriate machinery, and stayed by them from choice, because their lives had been a certain way from them. The men had a certain authority of mind, the simple abandon of persons whose feelings were largely with Nature. The women had no artificial ways, little learning but much good sense, and their greatest charm was that they were easily satisfied with small pleasures. Their children were the "country cousins," as much a sweet feature of farm-life as were its dandelions and buttercups.

Thus, by rotation, the homestead was always filled. The foreign land to which the dwellers all traveled was the little burial-ground close by. The journey was short by linear measurement, but, reckoned by the events and worth of the days and months and years it took to get there, it was a travel wonderfully rich in effort and results. The external signs of their journey were the ruts in the boards and stones, worn by the steady tramp of feet. What you could not see was the life which had been constantly diverging from such fountains of piety, truth and industry. As I look back, what strikes me most in that old country living is its simplicity, its earnestness, its poverty and its dignity. The men and women seemed to grapple with their inherited burdens. They were a race of born athletes and wrestlers with their soil, the natural outgrowth of it.—From E. H. Arr's "New England By-Gones."

Head, nerves, kidneys, bladder, womb, and blood affections of the urinary organs, gravel, scrofula, rheumatism, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis, dyspepsia, etc.

DR. PRICE'S REPUTATION!
Has been acquired by candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice. His price, no matter of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, sinks into the marrow, and is a harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed; no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinions, reasonable in our charges, clear in our terms, we do not know everything or cure everybody, but do lay claim to reason and common sense. We invite criticism, no matter what their ailment, to call and investigate before they abandon hope, make interjections and decide for yourselves; it will cost nothing as consultation is free. Visits made regularly.

JOHNSTOWN.
The district school is doing good work under N. E. Bennett as teacher.
The church social will be held at the house of Mr. John Zuili, Friday, January 25th.
Last Tuesday evening Mrs. Day, of Janesville, gave a reading at the church, which was listened to attentively by a very good audience.

Wonderful Results.
Robert Subbuck, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, writes: "I have used Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil both for myself and family for Diphtheria, with the very best results. I regard it as one of the best remedies for this disease, and would use no other."
Pope & Bitlan, Druggists, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, write: "We have never sold any medicine that gave us more satisfaction to the customer and pleasure to the seller as Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil."
For sale by A. J. Roberts and Croft & Sherer.

FOOTBALL.
Elder Brokaw administered the rite of baptism to eleven converts, last Monday evening.
Last Thursday evening the youngest child of Henry Howe died from inflammation of the lungs. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Schaefer, of Orlinville, where the remains were taken for burial, last Saturday.

Last Friday morning Mary, wife of H. J. Cole, died after a painful illness of ten days. Her sufferings were severe, but were evidently not fully realized, as most of the time she remained in an unconscious condition. Her death, however, was easy, passing away in silent slumber. She leaves a husband and three children to mourn her death, the youngest child being but a few weeks old. Mrs. Cole was a Christian woman in every sense, and died believing in the faith of her father. Rev. Brill conducted the funeral services at this place, last Sunday morning, and the funeral and family have the sympathy of all who knew them was fully attested by the large number of mourning friends present on that occasion.

Mrs. J. C. Owen, who has been suffering from severe indisposition, is convalescing.
At the present writing, Miss Mary Brogan is lying at the point of death, with no hopes of recovery. A speedy dissolution is inevitable, as she has been wasting rapidly with quick consumption.
The last meeting of the Literary was held at the residence of Solomon Spoon. A good time is reported.

William Howe, who has been residing in Chicago for the past two years, returned to his home at this place last week. His health being such as not to permit him to remain in the city any longer.
Miss Lilla Campbell will return to Elizabeth, N. Y., the latter part of this week.
Quite a large number of young people from here will "take in" the entertainment at Grange hall, Center, on Friday evening.

We understand that the sign has been taken down from the "haunted house" and another substantial, viz: "To let."
The M. E. social held last Thursday evening at the residence of H. A. Egerton, was the pleasantest we have yet attended. A large number was present and the collection excellent. A hint might be taken by other members of the society and a collection served at each meeting, which would add much to the interest thereof.

The entertainment given at Snyder's hall, last Tuesday evening, passed off pleasantly and successfully. The exercises were interesting, and Prof. Kidout's lecture on the marasmus, which cannot be explained nor comprehended. They must be witnessed before an idea can be formed about them, for they seem to be shrouded in mystery. Should Prof. Kidout ever give another exhibition here, he will be greeted with a full house. The proceeds of the entertainment and supper were $45.

Quarterly conference will be held in the M. E. church at 2 P. M. Friday, January 28th, with Elder Meade presiding. Quarterly meeting on Sunday at the usual hour.
Miss Mary Spoon has been the guest of Netie Snyder for a few days past.

Short Breath
O. Wortle, of Manchester, Ontario, N. Y., writes: "I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. I have had Asthma for several years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previously to using the Oil."
Sold by A. J. Roberts and Croft & Sherer.

Ladies dressing their hair elaborately for the evening will find that it imparts a healthy natural gloss to the hair.

Chas. C. Fray, of Adrian, Mich., says: "To-day complete surprise. I obtained a good night's rest, the first night I have in an 'Only Lung Pad.' I have suffered from Asthma for years." See Ad.

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

RATS, mice and insects will avoid a place that has been sprinkled with chloride of lime.
In dusting, use a soft cloth instead of a brush or wing; the cloth will catch all the dust, and you can shake it from the window, while the others set it floating again.
APPLE MARMALADE.—Do not peel your apples, but core and slice them as for a tart. Choose hard apples, like russets, or any apple that does not mash in cooking; boil them very rapidly in sirup, just enough to cover them, until clear looking, and, if liked, add a few cloves or lemon peel.
EGG MUFFINS.—Two well-beaten eggs, one pint of milk, one teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of yeast and flour to make a batter; stand in a warm place over night. In the morning stir in a tablespoonful of melted butter and half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a very little hot water. Bake in gem pans.

THE American Poultry Journal says that the Bronze turkey is the most useful of all the breeds. It originated from the wild and common domesticated turkey, and for rich plumage, size and weight exceeds all others. It is a very hardy bird, and if allowed to wander about and shift for itself, has a tendency to revert to a wild state.
RYE sown in August will make excellent pasture for sheep. It may be pastured pretty close and still left for grain next season, or it may be again pastured and plowed for corn in May. This is an excellent method of preparing land for corn, oats or potatoes, and, where market crops are grown, is used extensively as a preparation for spring crops.

CLEANING COMPOUND.—Mix one ounce of borax and one ounce of gum camphor with one quart of boiling water. When cool add one pint of alcohol; bottle and cork tightly. When wanted for use shake well and sponge the garments to be cleaned with it. This is an excellent mixture for cleaning soiled black cashmere and woolen dresses, coat collars and black felt hats.

COFFEE ICE CREAM.—Three pints of cream, one cup of strong, clear coffee, two cups of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of arrowroot in cold milk; heat half of the cream to boiling; stir in the sugar, and when this is dissolved, the coffee; then the arrowroot; boil all together about five minutes; when cold beat up very light, whipping in the rest of the cream by degrees; then freeze.

CHICKEN ICE CREAM.—Irish moss soaked in water one hour, and rinsed well to cleanse it of sand and a certain foreign taste; then steep in milk, keeping it just at the point of boiling or simmering for one hour, or until a rich yellow color is given to the milk; without cream or eggs, from one to one and a half ounces to a gallon only is necessary, and this will do to steep twice. Sweeten and flavor with lemon or vanilla, and freeze.

IT requires, theoretically, four pounds of corn to make one pound of pork, and allow for waste, undigested matter, and for the sustenance of life. It is scarcely possible that a pound of pork can be produced from less than this. To produce the best results attained have approached this very closely, and found a half pound of corn have produced a pound of pork. But as mixed food is more healthful than all corn, there is economy in feeding waste milk, boiled sweet potatoes, cut clover and other such food. Pork at the worst can be made for the price of four and a half pounds of corn.

ONION SOUP WITHOUT MEAT.—Drop in a saucepan a bit of butter half the size of a hen's egg. When hot add salt or three large onions, sliced thin; stir and cook them until they are well browned on one side; then turn them over and cook the other side. Stir this also until red and do not let it scorch. Next pour in a pint of boiling water and season to taste with pepper and salt. Mix well and let boil a minute; then pour it into a soup-kettle and place at the back of the range or stove until ready to serve. Add then one and a half pints of boiling milk and two or three well-mashed potatoes. Add to the potatoes a little of the soup at first, then a little more until they are smooth and thin enough to put into the kettle. Stir it all together; heat to see if the soup is properly seasoned; if not add whatever of salt, pepper or butter may be needed. Let it simmer a few minutes. Pour over toasted bread cut in small pieces and placed in the bottom of the tureen.

THE disease known as "big head" and "big jaw" is an enlargement of the bones of the head or the lower jaw. Both are the same disease, but appearing in different places. The character of the disease is a softening of the bones, which become porous or spongy, lose their solidity and strength, and become fractured, or the sinews and muscles lose their hold upon them. It is common for the whole body structure to be affected to this extent, but for the disease is constitutional. It is particularly one special to the Mississippi Valley, where the rich alluvial soils impart some quality to the herbage, or which causes it to be defective in some qualities, so as to affect the nutrition of animals disastrously. There is no cure in advanced cases, but when the bones of the upper jaw and face or the lower jaw are found to be enlarging, treatment by tonics should be begun at once. Phosphoric acid in sixty-drop doses may be given to a yearling horse, and soon drops to a yearling, in the drinking-water. An equivalent of phosphate of iron may be given. Exclusive corn-feeding is a frequent cause. Oats should be the chief food.

THERE are certain obstacles in every path that can be overcome only by the presence of self-confidence. There are outward hindrances to encounter, opposition to meet, difficulties to surmount, prejudices to sweep away, the very presence of which will terrify and appal them; they will melt away before the firm dignity of self-respect and self-reliance. There are also the innumerable obstacles within, inclinations to curb, passions to restrain, desires to guide, temptations to resist; these also need not only the power to deal with them, but a confidence in that power that can alone make it effective.

Harper's Magazine.
Illustrated.

"Studying the subject objectively and from the educational point of view—seeking to provide that which, taken altogether, will be of the most service to the largest number—I long ago concluded that, if I could, but one work for a public library, I could select a complete set of Harper's Monthly."—CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, Jr.

Contents are contributed by the most eminent authors and artists of Europe and America, while the long experience of the publishers has made them thoroughly conversant with the desires of the public, which they spare no effort to gratify.
